FABULOUS NEW MUSIC IN NOVEMBER

GOTTA TRY

An Original Song by Rosalie Drysdale

Available now at www.rosaliedrysdale.com;
World Wide Release. On November 12, 2021

This song identifies that EVERYBODY is talking.... Talking talking talking.... No shortage of opinions on any issue.... On and on it goes..

But fewer people are listening. So that's the first point made...is sort of "well I confess there's a lot about the future that I can't actually predict and anything I have to say right now, I'm kinda finding out that nobody really wants to hear it"....LOL

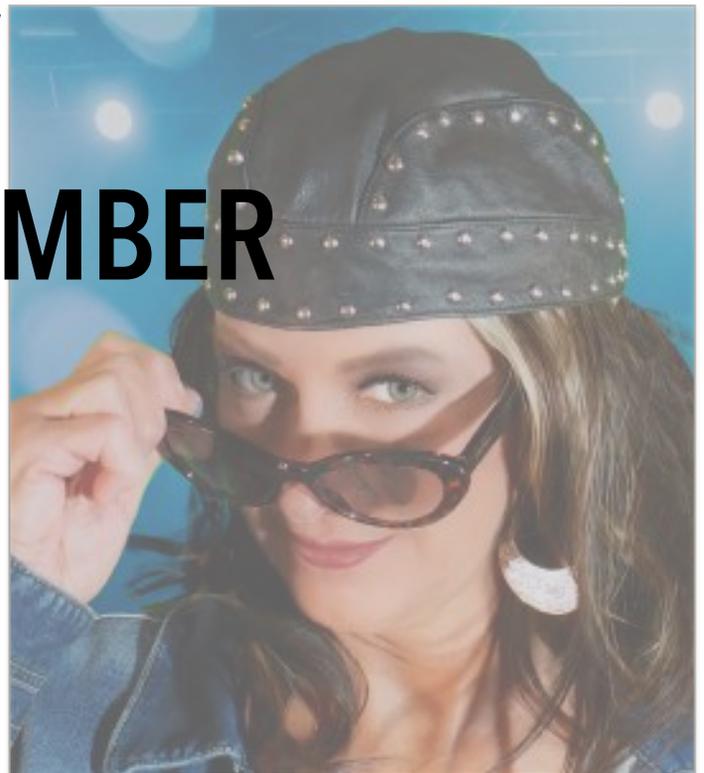

So the character in the song goes on to make the point, " I know I've failed in life, I've made bad choices, I've hopefully learned and I'm going to do better. In the meantime what I do have is that I can keep trying. I can keep not giving up."

And that thought pattern is established in the Hook. The character takes a stand and says, "listen, when all else is going to s, I can still hope and keep trying. Cuz I happen to believe that even when the preverbal night is long, I believe that the TRUTH will eventually prevail."

And then in the last verse, the character is basically saying that they are going to forge ahead, never quitting and always trying. Then asks the question, "who is with me?", "when all else fails can I count on you?". "I don't want to do this" thing called life "alone".

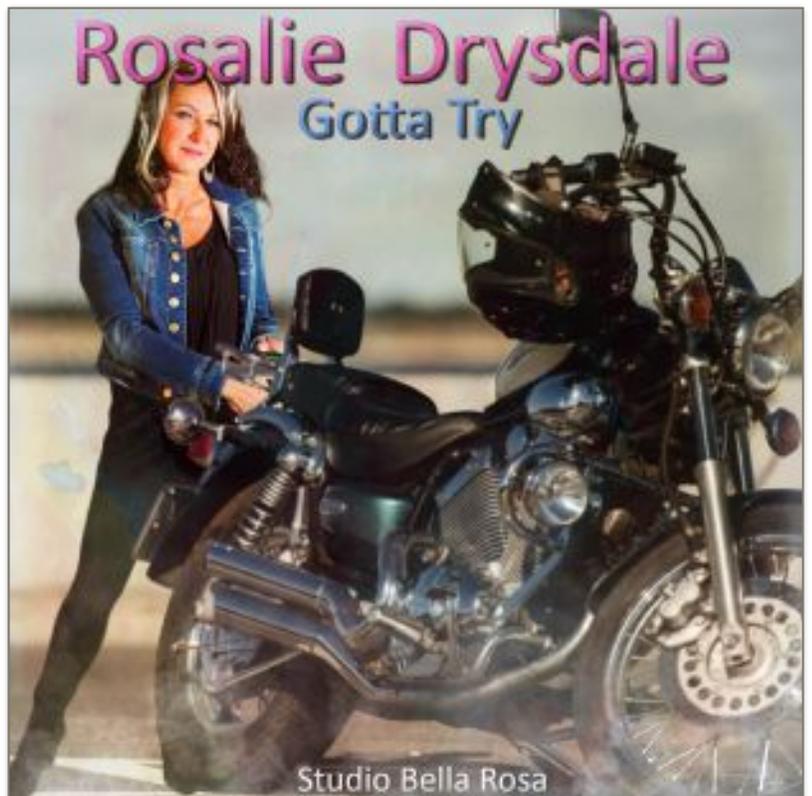

Gonna Try will inspire you.

Rosalie sings about how good things can happen to you, but only if you try, and are not intimidated to move forward.

The song talks about brining someone into your life and doing life with them, being able to depend on them.....but not giving up despite any set backs.

Rosalie's voice is powerful, the beat is classic rock and roll, you will love it.

COURAGE

FEATURE ARTICLE
NOVEMBER 2021

I am Speaking for myself here, and for no one else.

🤔 I have been reminded lately about what courage is or is not, and I have been giving a lot of thought to it as a result.

Things are not always what they may initially appear to be. Before one charges off and makes up ones mind about someone else's actions, it is always wise to consider circumstances that you or they may not consider, at least consciously.

In any case.....

We all start out in life at the same place, but our decisions more than anything else decide where we end up, and those decisions also either improve or impede our ability to make free decisions later down the road.

By the way, it is seldom your circumstances that determine where you will be in life. Many people want you to believe that...it makes you a victim and it puts you at risk of being controlled by someone else...never be a victim always know you cannot control what happens to you, only how you react.....By the way this may not apply if a piano falls from the sky onto your head...then I think it does not matter what you do, you can only react in one way!) 🤔

I say this from a point of view of having had a lot of very difficult situations in my life, some of my own making and some maybe not so much, but in every case, I and I alone had to make decisions which I had to live with for the rest of my life. Sometimes these decisions only affected me, but more often then not they affected a lot of other people. Sometimes I was well equipped to understand the consequences, and sometimes I was not, and did not realize what some of the outfall would be ahead of time. That is life!

I believe I can say with some confidence that, mostly, I made decisions that left options open to me in future. I made decisions that did not make me too dependant on someone else's arbitrary decisions about me. Believe me, some of those decisions were extremely difficult, and had life long consequences.

You see sometimes decisions are not always about having courage or not, but what we decide also hinges on what we perceive the consequence of that decision might be, at the time we make it. What I mean is, if you are highly dependant on something or someone else who is not equally dependant on you, then you are subject to their whims and they can control you without any consequence for them.

What the heck am I talking about.

“WHAT THE HECK AM I TALKING ABOUT”

I getting to that.

Let's say you go the the corner store, to buy a loaf of bread. Well the store keeper is sure nice to you, he wants your business, and you are sure nice to the store keeper because you want his bread. See, mutual dependance. Now think about if the store keeper was being forced to give you the bread for free. Do you think the store keeper would care about how nice he was to you, how would you feel, and act toward the store keeper who is giving you this “free” bread. Now we all know exceptions to this little story, there are those angels out their that have a higher calling and they do act differently, but most times they do!

To my point, often your government holds its hands out to many of us and says, do not worry, we will help you, come and get this "free" help, take a hold of this rope and we will pull you up to success. Do not worry, trust us. We can give you "free" money to help your business, your art etc. Take the time to fill out these forms, sign your independence over to us and we will take care of you. We will determine if you are worthy of our help, but you can trust us.

“WE DO NOT REALIZE UNTIL IT IS TOO LATE...”

This is surely tempting, but it can be like an addictive drug. At first you are seduced by it and then before you know it you are owned by it.

What we do not realize until it is too late for us, that we become dependant on their "free" help, their easy path to "success". A large part of all of your future is dependant on their good will.

We cannot do anything to upset their apple cart. They can arbitrarily stop the flow of money or assistance or whatever they have "hooked" us on, at their whim, so we are no longer independent of them. They can do what they like, and just like the climber holding on to the rope, we feel our life depends on their good will, whatever that is. They might cut the rope we are clinging on to, and then what do we do.

You see this is the trick, this is how you loose control, you loose your ability to object, you become enslaved and you keep your thoughts to yourself. After a while it becomes easier to just convince yourself that what they are telling you is the truth, there is that pesky Cognitive Dissonance again. Too big a word for this old cowboy though.

“.....but I knew it was not for free. Your free will, your free conscience and your ability to”

Let me tell you from someone that started out homeless and worked hard and tirelessly to make a place for themselves in the world (as meagre as it may be), those government folks came to me, and offered me a free hand up, but I knew it was not for free. Your free will, your free conscience and your ability to object, was the price, it always was.

You know the old "How Many Fingers Am I Holding Up", of course at first we know they are holding up four, but after a while we will agree with them that they are holding up five and we actually begin to believe it.. I know I know, you would never do that...or would you?

Keep in mind, for every dollar you get from their "programs" it probably cost two or three dollars of someone else's money to get it to you. They certainly have sticky fingers don't they.

And they want you to fawn over their kindness and generosity for giving you someone else's money.

It is always tempting to grab hold of the rope and let them pull you up, it certainly seems easier than actually climbing that steep ladder of success yourself. The biggest difference between the two is that if you are climbing a ladder you can choose to stop, climb higher or climb down, whatever you want. When you are being pulled up on a rope by someone else, they control how high you get, they control if you get off or not, and I can guarantee to you, they will never pull you up to the top, they will keep you in their control, and you will be helpless to do anything else but obey.

It reminds me of some of those old religions where the people were always trying to guess what their god wanted. Of course you can never know what an imaginary god wants and they would imagine all kinds of things they could do to satiate their god, you know they would go as far as sacrificing their own dear children to satiate their imaginary gods.

What will you sacrifice?

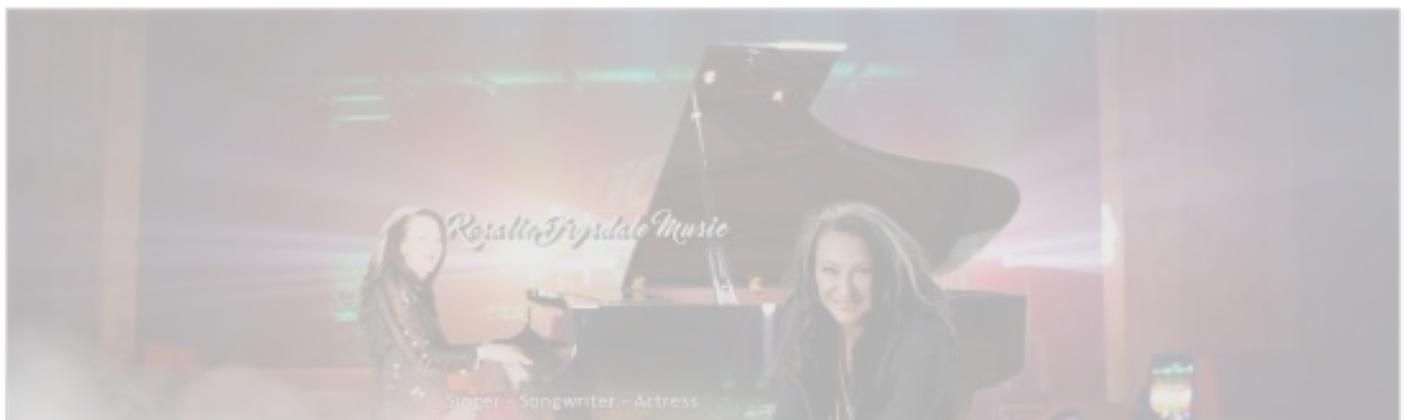

If you find yourself dependant on a faceless and soulless bureaucracy, what would you do to satiate it, to ensure you do not offend it, what would you do.

How about thinking about jumping off the rope they suspend you on. You might get bruised when you hit the ground, but take if from me, the bruises will heal, and then your heart will heal and your courage will grow, and you will have the chance to become someone you will be proud of.

After all it does not matter a hoot what I think, what matters is how you feel deep down, you know, when no one else is around and you are just alone with yourself.

I know it is old and cliché, but I love it: "Courage does not mean you are without fear, it means you are scared as hell, but you saddle up anyway".

That is my two cents worth.

Psalms 23 - A Little Light and Inspiration for Dark Times

👄 Rosalie's inspiring performance of her original musical presentation of Psalms 23. ❤️❤️

☀️ In these dark and uncertain times, we need to remember what has always been true, what will always be true, and what inspires us to know there are better days to come. 🙏

😊 Be inspired to be the person your family and community can look up to and look to. We hope this can help you to be that person. We all love you, and honour you! 🥰

It can be such a comfort to reach toward a power and hope that is greater than ourselves. Rosalie has always put her hope and trust in that place. 🌹🌹
