October New Releases

Now for more detail on my new single releases that will happen in October. I am releasing THREE new singles in October.

Here are some close up images of each of the singles artwork, along with a brief description of each song:

Touch Your People Once Again

Release: October 1, 2021

Description:

Touch Your People Once Again is one of the most intimate of modern Gospel Songs.

I've known this song for many years. It was written by Pelle Karlsson and it has been covered by many singers, including his wife, Evie Tournquist Karlsson. (I was a big fan of hers when I was a kid).

The song came back into my memory just a short time ago and I could not get it out of my mind and psyche so I knew I had to record it. And with the help of genius man, James Creasey, we recorded our own arrangement of it.

This song grips me in a very personal and deep way. I am a person of faith, with a deep reverence for God: And as we all grapple with what's going on in the world around us these days, I just felt so strongly, that no better message needs to be sent and no more urgent prayer prayed than this, "Oh God, Please Touch Your people". We have crazy all around us, pain, confusion, division..... We need God.

So it's a song of acknowledgment of our need for God to help us through our current times. I also find it remarkable that this song was written almost 40 years ago and that it is SO applicable to the times we find ourselves in today. It's really a message for any and all times of history.

By the way, did you know that my Music Video "Psalms 23" has now had over 70,000 views on Youtube. WOW, and thank you to everyone who has subscribed to my channel on Youtube, and thank you to everyone who watches my videos.

Natalie

Release: October 29, 2021

Description:

Natalie is an original song by Rosalie Drysdale.

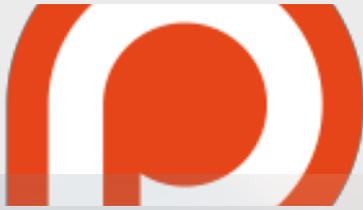

It tells a haunted tale of a life spent lonely with regrets over past Failures and missed opportunities.

Rosalie sings the song with the deepest of emotions, her incredible voice allows her to portray the depth of anguish felt by Natalie.

This song is a cautionary and conciliatory tale in that it demonstrates how many of us allow our past hurts, disappointments, perhaps our own failures to dictate our final analysis of things.

The song talks about a woman who had as much potential as the next person - and perhaps even more. However, dismal and very difficult external circumstances in her life caused her so much pain. As for any of us, she likely didn't do everything right, however she did her best and worked very hard in her life.

But at the end of her life, though she raised a family and her children adored her, her many, many disappointments and hurts and buried heartache plagued her soul until the end. At the end of her life she was inconsolable.

MONTHLY OPINION Human Vs. Computer Music

That Is The Question!

🎵 For years, there has been an ongoing discussion over whether or not music produced by humans using traditional acoustic instruments is superior to music made on computers and synthesizers. 🖥️

I thought this might be a discussion worth having with our subscribers... so here we go.... 😊

Rosalie Drysdale Music, have decided that we will make our music using real live musicians, with real live acoustic instruments.

😍 That is a choice I have made, based on a number of factors, not the least of which is to support local artists, who at the very best of times struggle to make a living with their music.

I also record my music in a number of ways, some more traditional, and some in a more modern sense.

What I mean by that is, most often, even when live musicians are recorded, each instrument is isolated from the other, and often recorded at different times, and even in different locations.

The reason for this is, it makes the life of the mixing engineer easier, since they are dealing with individual instruments without the influence of other instruments. 🤖

Also each musician is responsible on their own for getting their part "right". any one musician can spend hours getting it right without affecting the other musicians. If you have six musicians playing a part

Touch Your People: 19,940 Views

I am so grateful, to all of my viewers, please continue to check in for more new content, and...please subscribe to my channel, it really helps my music to get together and one messes up, all six musicians have to do it over, until they all get it right, all at the same time. 🤔

I often use the isolated single player technique, however, often this results in music that does not reflect the live interaction that naturally happens when experienced musicians perform together. So often I record a portion of an entire song at the same time, with many musicians playing at once.

My album "A Time To Remember" as much as possible, we recorded the live musicians playing together...this included the piano, horns and drums. As a result, we got a more authentic sound...a sound that included the live musicians interacting and responding to each other as they played...this is how the original music was meant to be played and heard.

But back to the question of real people playing vs computer music..... 🤖

Music has been with humans for tens of thousands of years.....the acoustic instruments were made with natural materials and were specifically and uniquely designed to acoustically match and respond to the human ear. 🎵

Over that same time, the human ear also evolved and adjusted to hear the music being played by these natural instruments.

Like each one of us, music is flawed, it is not perfectly timed, pitched or sculpted, it was not originally meant to be listened to on electronic devices, it was meant to be listened to in a live interaction between the musician, their instrument and the human ear.

Recall the days of the travelling bards, going from town to town, singing the news, stories, and entertaining. 📣 more exposure and please share my Youtube videos.

Thanks again, and stay tuned for more great content on our Youtube Channel.

When a bunch of musicians and their acoustic instruments get together to make music there has to be a collaboration between all of them, they have to come to an understanding of what is needed and what is possible. When they all "click" together, it is truly something special.

It is one of the truly "human" experiences.

Both from a human limitations point of view and a cost point of view. Making music in this way can be very expensive.

There is a certain excitement, and a bond that develops between a musician and their audience, in a live performance.

Having said that, almost all music now, that is not being performed live, is digitally recorded, and digitally reproduced on a variety of devices, in a variety of imperfect places and times.

Music is transmitted in files over the internet, and the quality of the those files, and the variety and quality of the devices we listen to the music on vary widely.

We have found that out of the millions of fans that have listened to Rosalie Drysdale Music, 85% of the fans listened to our music or videos on hand held devices, like smart phones.

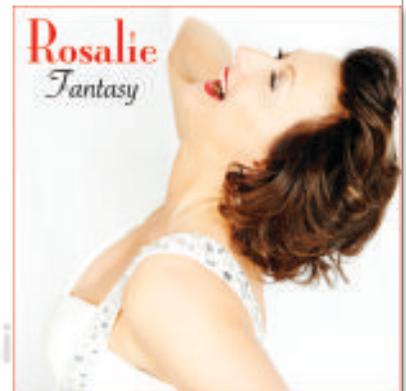

How does this affect the music?????

How does that affect the way the listener experiences the music.

We spend countless hours pouring over every second of every piece of music we produce, so that it can be the most perfect. 🔍

For an average song...not including writing and composing the song...just the performance and recording part takes hundreds or thousands of person hours, and thousands of hours of listening and editing...to get it just right.

On Rosalie's album "Fantasy" and the song "People All Over The World" we recorded, in studio with all of the musicians you hear, plus a live choir...the vocal choir parts are real, there were almost a dozen singers in studio all at once to create those "real" live human sounds. 🎤🎤🎤🎤

🔊 We utilize state of the art and very expensive speakers in specifically designed rooms to get the best out of the music we are creating....and yet 85% of the music is listened to on a smart phone.....perhaps on a bus going home, 🚌 or in the yard, cutting the grass.

This is the reality of modern life.
